Janet Kenefsky: Solving problem makes purposeful/intentional

Virginia DeMario: Hm. More let downs

Angela Schaeffer: good plan

Kait Hatzidakis: I agree - Interconnectedness is the core of business. We are here to exchange value

Erin Stevens: relationships and connections , in theory great execution sometimes difficult

Greg Engelke: where are the chairs to sit down

Virginia DeMario: A good theory

Greg Engelke: Many of us hate Chats and typing

Amanda Kaiser: Everyone, what are some fun icebreaker questions you,Äöve asked?

Jacci Thayer: how to get people to attend

Carmen Swartz: Name, Organization, what did you have for breakfast this morning?

Virginia DeMario: How long have you been in the ---- business

Annette Belding: what was your first concert

Kerry OBrien: What's your super power?

Heather Kumpke: all, what is the best way to make it meaningful for attendees

James Riley: Where is your favorite place to vacation?

Destiny Ihenacho: Never have I games

Lynn Zalokar: Pumpkin spice yay or nay?

Judy Kuhl: How to get them to mingle and not in normal cluster

Anna Clementi: What do you suck at?

Rachel Grimes: regional question - what do you call soda/pop/coke/cola

Tonya Pedro: What is your favorite food? I am a major foodie

Kris Ackley: Are you team pumpkin or team apple in the fall?

Miriam Battson: 2 truths and a lie

Jennifer Kowal: The change of Seasons (summer to fall, etc.)
All- what are some fun things you,Äôve done to encourage engagement at a small conference event with about a dozen exhibitors?

Mary Beth Cowardin: I love "what was your first concert"

Naomi Keltz-Jones: tips to create an engaging networking experience online?

Erin Pearson: don't like icebreakers

Jan Stieger: Everyone, How do get get people to. write real thoughts, not just a few words?

Cate O'Connell: Yess

Kait Hatzidakis: Alcohol!

Jan Stieger: What do you do to have fun - sounds like a come-on :(

Virginia DeMario: Are you a dog or cat person

Annette Belding: What is your favorite part about your trade?

April Reszka: small breakouts that you can move between

Ann Llnk: Speed networking within the larger event!

Erin Pearson: Is overthinking and over planning - not leaving time for shares - getting in the way of being organic in relating as professionals

Kait Hatzidakis: Improv games

Kerry OBrien: Not pickles, but <https://www.piccles.com>.

Amanda Kaiser: piccles is a lot of fun

Lynn Zalokar: 10 people?

Greg Engelke: Very fun and casual

Kait Hatzidakis: Turn your night into a night out.

Amy Pryor: Virtual Photobooths

Nicole McAllister: Themed virtual events

Heather Sanderson: 60 ideas in 60 minutes

Heather Sanderson: ^^^^ Second that

Kerry OBrien: I,Äôd say, suggest it and see who bites

Devon Braun: @Greg, send them all GrubHub cards for them to get their food, then when they log on do a "Food Bingo" to see what everyone got.

Kait Hatzidakis: meeting?

Shelley Wales: Menit.com does group polls on your phones that can be interesting and fun

Devon Braun: ^^It's so fun and very engaging

Katie Dickey: Themed trivia to your organization. I belong to sports association and we had once a month Trivia night and all questions were sports related

Cortney Pickett: Amy Pryor: Dancing or taking an upfront pause + breathe. Tony Robbins style

Kait Hatzidakis:

Amy Pryor: How quickly they answered the questions depends on the points they get.

Shelley Wales: @Katie, did you meant <https://www.mentimeter.com/>?

bobbi vandenbulcke: Trivia Nights with questions about our member businesses
Both outcomes. To get the 10 people I know, like, value and can learn from out for virtual supper. ALSO TO find before hand find the next new group of 10 people at the meeting that I see value of getting the 10 of us around the supper table.

Greg Engelke: are in this together.

V K: are in this together.

Devon Braun: Kahoot.com

Shari Williams: I love KAHOOT!

Amanda Kaiser: Check out free Google Jamboard at <https://jamboard.google.com>

Shelley Wales: I used "how would a dog wear pants" for a virtual conference!

Kathrine Dwyer: kahoot is fabulous for networking

Cortney Pickett: JINDO Jam is cool as well.

Miriam Battson: all the time

Virginia DeMario: Yes, it does happen.

Amanda Kaiser: How can Mary encourage virtual participants to log-in on time?

Devon Braun: first 5 people get $$$

Dante Preciado: Prizes

Shelley Wales: I LOOOOOVEEE unofficial starts! I now do them all the time!

carason lehmann: offer prizes

Jan Stieger: giveaway

Stacey Kelly: auto-generated email reminders

Samantha Kenny: email reminders

James Riley: Make them think we,Äll be talking about them if they,Äre not there.

Kerry OBrien: Start the meeting with VALUABLE information - not housekeeping/routine stuff

Heather Sanderson: call them out in a funny way

Devon Braun: What is an unofficial start?

Amy Pryor: We created a waiting room and we start unofficial start 5 minutes in

Judy Kuhl: Cut off time to get in to the meeting!

Erin Stevens: incentives (drawing those on in time) , pre-function start

Lynn Zalokar: Will we get a copy of the chat?

Amanda Kaiser: Wonder is still free, but not for long: <https://www.wonder.me>

Amanda Kaiser: Circles is amazing! Find them at <https://circl.es>.
As with all these platforms I highly recommend practicing them a lot and providing good guides/instruction to your participants on how to use them :)

Shelley Wales: virtual meetings?

Greg Engelke: virtual meetings?

Amanda Kaiser: Has anyone run a solve-event and what was it like?

Erin Pearson: Hard to get ppl to be vulnerable....

Katy Karrer: Small group and then large group presentation and discussion

Miriam Battson: how to support restaurants and retailers during covid

Jan Stieger: We did table problem solving with industry issues. Tables reported out their conversations. Gave everyone a chance to participate without taking ownership

James Riley: You make your own luck.

Amanda Kaiser: ome 1-to-1 networking platforms are: <https://gatherround.com>, <https://try.twine.nyc>, <https://www.runtheworld.today>

Kristen Parent: We use Blitzr for this.

Leressa Joiner: I love that!!
